

CERTIFICATE PROGRAMS

The University of Connecticut offers several types of certificate programs: post-master's (or sixth year) (p. 3) certificates, graduate certificates, and post-baccalaureate (p. 3) certificates. Post-master's/sixth year certificates that require 30 or more credits for completion follow rules and requirements that are similar to those of an equivalent master's degree (if one exists). Graduate certificate programs consist entirely of graduate courses (those numbered 5000 or above). Post-baccalaureate certificate programs consist primarily of undergraduate courses (those numbered 1000-4999). A certificate can be earned either as a "stand-alone" certificate (without simultaneous enrollment in a degree program) or while simultaneously pursuing a graduate degree. To earn a certificate, students must first apply for admission to a certificate program through The Graduate School. This applies to both external applicants and currently matriculated students who wish to pursue a certificate along with a graduate degree.
